Parliament House is a handsome building in the Classic style, with a Grecian Colonnade, which was opened in 1883. It contains the rooms where the Abgeordneten and Herrenhaus (the Lower and Upper Houses) sit to administer the affairs of the country, and possesses a magnificent approach, decorated with statues of Greek and Roman writers, in the middle being a massive statue of Minerva, 50 feet in height. At the corners of this approach are two fine bronze statues of Horse trainers.
